COMMITTEE GET FAVORABLE REPORT

The committee appointed at a meeting of the Board of Trade on Thursday evening consisting of Dr. J. O. Stewart, W. J. Tarbox, R. Bird, O. L. Smith and R. F. Kerr, went to Dayton last Friday and met Mr. Maxwell Howard and Mr. Clark in regard to locating the Howard Paper Company in this place.

The committee reported that stock and bonds had been sold to the extent of $75,000 and that the sale of $25,000 in bonds had been secured. The terms were discussed by the committee and Messrs. Clark and Howard and a favorable consideration given the matter.

The enterprise was discussed as to the erection of the plant, number of people to be employed, water and sites in view. The committee was given the assurance that nothing was to be done until everything was in proper form and the subscribers given every possible protection. The committee was greatly impressed with the fairness which Mr. Howard displayed.

At the conference Dr. Stewart was empowered to secure options on different sites and to start drilling at once so that a test could be made for water.

As stated in the last issue of the Herald there was a strong probability that the mill would be located here providing water could be secured. The committee telephoned the good news at noon Friday.

Upon the return of the committee a large crowd of citizens had gathered at the depot to give them a royal welcome in recognition of the results of the trip. The small boy as well as the aged man was out in full force with fireworks, drums and different noise devices. The K. of P. band rendered several selections which added greatly to the celebration.

Saturday morning Dr. Stewart had the Johnson Bros. at work in the George Shroeder field east of town making a test well.

THEATER NOTES

Richard Carle is one of the unique persons of the American stage. He is author, composer, lyric writer, stage manager, dancing instructor, star comedian and producer. He not only writes his own plays but he provides much of the music, arranges the dances, prepares the sketches for the scenery, produces and manages his plays, thereby drawing salary as a star, drawing royalties from his songs and participating in the net profits as manager.

Mr. Carle is still on the sunny side of forty. He was born in Somerville, Mass., a suburb of Boston. He was christened Charles N. Carleton. His father, Edgar W. Carleton, still lives in Somerville. According to the father, everything indicated a stage career for the son from earliest youth. When he was still in his kilts, young Carleton strung a wire across an unused wagon left mounted some old chairs and gave shows in which he furnished the whole entertainment. The admission fee was ten cents and the receipts were cashed at a junk dealer's.

When he was 35 or 36, young Carleton fed his stage fever with frequent but fugitive trips to the old Howard Atheneum in Boston. There in exchange for admission, he passed out programs—a tall, gawky boy with light hair, spectacles and an imitation fur cap, with the accompaniment of ear muffs, tied together atop. He had a keen eye for Somerville faces and when he saw a neighbor coming he introduced the novelty of passing out programs behind his back. To get himself out nights he elected himself a member of a mythical club which had for its recreations whist, sleigh riding, candy pulling and spelling matches.

"It is strange your club never meets at our house," observed his father.

"Yes, it is strange," replied the son, "but our club is very peculiar. Watching the old-timers at the Howard was an inspiration to young Carleton. Several of the men were prominent in amusements used to be great favorites at the old music hall, and he longed to be able to sing, dance and do funny falls as they did. The idea of the legitimate stage also occurred to him, for once in a day dream he had printed this card, which he quietly slipped to his mother one morning:

RICHARD CARLE.
BOSTON MUSEUM.

His mother beamed upon him fondly as she saw him in perspective a representative actor.

"But I never dared show that card to father, who was sitting across the table," declares the comedian. However he clung to the CHURCHES CONTEST FOR SALE MONEY.

The case of D. M. Stewart against the Reformed Presbyterian church, came up in Common Pleas court before Judge Clark, of Lebanon, Tuesday, in the matter of the distribution of proceeds from the sale of the old Third United Presbyterian church property at Market and Columbus streets. The second amount to $1333.34. The Second United Presbyterian church, into which the Third was merged several years ago, claims the proceeds, but in a cross petition the Reformed Presbyterian congregation of Cedarville set up a claim for the money on the grounds that the congregation, which formerly occupied the church did not adhere to the Westminster Confession of Faith, on which condition it was deeded the property by Daniel MacMillan in 1840.

The old Third church comprised originally that portion of the Massie's Creek Reformed Presbyterian church, which came to Xenia when the congregation divided in those early days. The other portion located in Cedarville, where it is still flourishing as the Reformed Presbyterian church, but the Xenia congregation united with the United Presbyterian church in 1870, and finally abandoned the property for church purposes. Upon this alleged violation of the contract by which the congregation became the possessor of the property, is the claim of the Cedarville church based. Judge Clark reserved his decision—Gazette.

Rev. O. H. Milligan notified the United Presbyterian congregation Sabbath that he had accepted the call to the Avalon, Pa., congregation of the same denomination. Rev. Milligan was installed pastor on January 12, 1909, and his work in the pastorate has been highly commended by members of his own congregation as well as by other denominations. The announcement is that he will enter upon his duties in the new field of labor on the first Sabbath of February. At the present time Rev. Milligan is clerk of Xenia Presbytery, he has also been treasurer. The Avalon congregation has a membership of 350 and pays a salary of $1,500.

"The Man of the Hour," the great dramatic success of recent years, comes to the Fairbanks, on Wednesday, matinee and night, January 20, where as elsewhere all over America, it will excite enormous interest and discussion. "The Man of the Hour" is a vivid, vital American play by George Broadhurst. It is no mere drama of politics, although it has been discussed and written about by public men of every political creed. Its theme of municipal honesty is of vital importance to every believer in good citizenship. Its delightfully human love story pleases women. It interests the young just as deeply as those of elder and more serious thought. It is an object lesson in honesty and clean living made upon the mind of every boy and girl who sees it. This play is thoroughly American to its core. Its characters are flesh and blood people who act, speak and move just as in familiar every day life. There is not a city of over 20,000 inhabitants between Portland, Maine, and Portland, Oregon, that does not contain these clearly defined types with all their faults and virtues. There is a wonderfully strong cast for production here, made up of the people who have been most eminent in the long city runs. Among them are Cyril Scott, of "Prince Chap" fame, Harry Harwood, Rapley Holmes, James B. Wilson, William Deming, Edward LeSaint, Charles Steadman, Albert Parker, Thomas P. Tracy, M. J. Cody, Basil West, Alma Powell, Marion Chapman and Kate Lester.

It Was An Easy Game.

Some time ago Jamestown high school issued a challenge to play Cedarville college a game of basketball. The home boys, not to be outdone went into the game on Tuesday evening that made the so-called champions of the two counties look rather small.

The game was anything but interesting from the fact that it was all one sided. Cedarville winning by a score of 40 to 0.

The game was remarkably clean and free from all that make basketball disagreeable.

The next game will be played in Jamestown and in all probability the third on an independent floor.

Real Touch Of Winter.

The first real touch of winter arrived here Monday and most of the day a heavy snow with a strong wind made things very unpleasant for the inaugural parade in Columbus. During that night snow continued to fall until there was some six or seven inches by morning.

Tuesday continued colder and by evening the zero mark had been reached. By Wednesday morning there had been a moderation and throughout that day a snow fell which measured eight or ten inches.

When reading the ads of some of the patent medicine firms if the really expect the public to read one-half they say. Take Rheumatic Remedies, for instance—how often do we see a remedy advertised as a "positive cure."

We have in our

GAMBLERS MAKE HASTY EXIT.

Mayor Wolford and Officer Kenyon forced their way into Clark Baker's restaurant Wednesday evening about eight o'clock and in less time than it takes to tell it there was all sorts of scrambling to get from the back room where a game of "craps" was on.

Some twenty or twenty-five were crowded into a room that was hardly large enough for ten or twelve. The officers managed to get a small portion of the money and the dice. Newton Daily, one of the "regulars" in the daily card game in Andrew Bros. Coal Office, is said to have been presiding over the crap game at the time participants made a hasty retreat. Daily stayed long enough to get part of the money on the table, according to Officer Kenyon.

The back door opened into the rear of the Thomas Mitchell lot and it is said that some important stunts were put on in order to evade the officers.

Barker was placed under arrest and spent the night in jail. He entered a plea of guilty and was fined $10 and costs, about $15.

CHANGE THE DAY.

It is certain that the present legislature could not pass a measure that would give more general satisfaction as one to change the date of inaugurations of the state's governors.

For a number of years there has been some agitation on this subject both in state and national affairs. The death of so many prominent men the past few years that can be directly traced to such demonstrations should bring about deliberation on the part of our law makers.

Seldom do we find decent weather in January or March that men can take part in a fitting demonstration on such an occasion.

It is evident that unless there is a change in the date of state and national inaugurations there should not be the military pageant display that has been the great attraction in former years.

The inaugural of the past few years means the sacrifice of lives through exposure to both state officials and the public that gathers in honor of such demonstrations.

The mail order catalogs from the metropolitan department stores become more voluminous and alluring every year. Our home merchants can meet this competition by thoroughly advertising their goods. There are better bargains here at home than any where else, when you consider that the home merchant always gives you individual attention and stands back of his goods. But you have got to call your trade about these bargains or they won't know their existence.

HOLLAND'S HEROIC AGE.

Her History Teems With Accounts of Stirring Deeds.

The Dutch have fought for what they own, and they have been among the greatest fighters that the world has ever seen. When their prowess in the past is considered it seems like a humane duty to drop a word of warning upon the belligerent intelligence of Castro, lest by some strange resurrection the spirit should reappear that once made the greatest armies and navies of Europe tremble.

For a thousand years the Dutch fought the sea waves and the river floods, and they liked their land, which is lower than the ocean. During this time also they were fighting the hardly less persistent and pitiless human enemies that assailed them. And yet the whole kingdom of the Netherlands, with its eleven provinces, which is more than a third as large again as the original Dutch United States of the sixteenth century, is less than half the size of South Carolina.

These Dutch in some respects were the strangest people that Europe ever knew, for while displaying a most astonishing capacity for war on land and sea they were converting a mudhole into a garden, and their inventions of useful means to healthful and abundant living, from the plow in its modern form to the humble, were landmarks in the history of European civilization.

The Dutch developed their extraordinary capacity as fighters in their prolonged resistance to the Spanish tyranny, which in extent and ferocity is almost unparalleled in history. This resistance was the more remarkable and the more astonishing when we consider the resources of Spain, then the first power in the world.

This was in the latter half of the sixteenth century, and by the beginning of the seventeenth century the Dutch had created a fleet that made them the first naval power of the world and with their hardy and daring seamen swept the most distant seas of Spanish commerce.

There was a long truce with Spain and then a renewal of the war, when the Netherlands attacked the Spanish possessions in the East Indies and laid the foundation of the Dutch empire in that part of the world.—Boston Globe.

A Mean Trick.

(Copyright, 1908, by American Press Association.)

London, Dec. 5, 1918.

I am sorry, my dear daughter, that you have entered into a movement to obtain the vote for women. Ten years ago I took part in a movement with that object in view, and it turned out a lamentable failure.

I will give you a brief account of how our organization was broken up with a view to inducing you to abandon your attempt, forcing some such outcome for the present movement. Our society grew rapidly, far more rapidly than one could have expected. We had meetings in Hyde park, gathering thousands of women with appropriate banners and much enthusiasm. We stormed the house of commons and forced the members to listen to us. Our enemies, the men, arrested us and kept us in jail.

Finally, when the house of commons was in despair of being able to defeat us by open methods it must needs resort to underhanded tactics. A secret session a committee was appointed to find and execute some method to break us up. This committee consisted of old bachelors—rather, old curmudgeons—all of them confessed woman haters and mean enough to take advantage of these weaknesses peculiar to our sex.

They began by laying a plan to get rid of our admirable officers and put in such women as would wreck the society. Our annual election and appointment of committees came off shortly after these things began their work, and they took advantage of the confusion. Just before the election we were surprised at a large accession to our membership. Then on the day of the election, while we were preparing for the ballot, handbills were scattered about the hall in great numbers stating that at a specially called meeting standard goods that all women must have were offered at less than half the usual price. A silk dress that would ordinarily cost £50 might be had for £20. Hats in the latest style that were selling for £5 were offered at £2 6s. Cloaks worth £10 were to be had for £4. These are but a few examples to show you what bargains were to be obtained. The sale was to take place during the afternoon of our election, but all women know that to secure what they want at such sales they must be on hand when the sale opens.

Well, no sooner were the handbills read than there began a gradual disappearance of the members, just as water leaves a bathtub without one's seeing where it goes. One by one our women slipped out, but it was noticeable that all the men remained. At that time, my child, your father was not doing at all well at his business, and I was wearing a hat that had been long out of fashion. It was impossible for me to appear in any gathering in such frightful headgear. Satisfying myself that the men were not going to desert without me, I went to seize the opportunity.

Now, our hall was on the opposite side of London from the place of the sale. I took a bus to get there and on arriving at the store asked where the sale was going on. What sale? The sale announced in the handbill? No one knew of any handbills or any sale. Then I saw that something had gone wrong. Taking another bus, I went back to the hall in company with others of our members. I found that the election was over and that the officers had been put in and new committees appointed. What do you think? These mean, contemptible men—villains had hired the new members to join and had produced the handbills, and while we bona fide members of the society were going to a sale from the bogus sale the busses had elected a ticket given them by the men.

This was not the worst of our misfortunes. The new officers and committees were selected by the men for the violence of their temper and the volatility of their tongues. The very first meeting after their installation showed that we had met with a quietus. One of the committees said something that made the president mad, and she threw her gavel at the offending woman. The secretary rose to her feet and began a steady stream of talk. Other members strove in vain to get the floor, but the shrill voice of the secretary, sounding like a steam whistle, drowned them out. At one time there were a dozen women gesticulating and shrieking like a storm in a storm when a man said that the chairwoman of the committee of ways and means, a perfect Hercules, seizing a table used by the secretary, went through the hall for the purpose of clearing it. In five minutes there was not a member left.

By such contemptible process did these mean, vile, knavish, sneaking, rascally, nervous, unfair creatures to whom has been given the name that thwart the noble work we had in hand. That was the last of the suffragette movement of the first decade of the present century, and members of parliament have since been despised enough to boast that by a political maneuver only worthy of an American's fashioning primary they had secured peace and comfort.

It isn't, my dear, that women are not fitted for suffrage and to occupy any sphere that men can occupy. It is that men will descend to such unscrupulous tricks to beat us out of our rights. Woman has the nobler nature, and man—

By the bye, I hear the new hats are more-board in shape and ostrich feathers quite the thing. What hideous shapes! Your loving father, ANNA BENTLEY.

HAWAIIAN SHARK GOD.

How the Monster Man Eaters Were Lured to Death.

The ancient Hawaiians were never cannibals, but they had a dread system of religious despotism that made human sacrifices a common practice. They had many deities, usually associated, or supposed to be associated, with natural phenomena, and, like most barbarous peoples, their worship largely took the form of propitiation of the gods who were more often than not antagonistic to humanity.

Mano, the shark, was one of the most feared and consequently venerated of the Hawaiian gods, and their close association with the ocean, from which a large part of their food came, of course brought familiarity with this great fish. Of the large family of sharks, the great man eater species (Carcharodon carcharias), or nihi, as the native knew it, was naturally the most dreaded. This shark is not so common in Hawaiian waters as it is in the West Indies and in the Indian ocean, but its appearance is frequent enough to have made the islanders thoroughly familiar with its voracious habits. Strange as it may seem, they did not hesitate to kill it, and in fact the feat was, at least under some circumstances, considered to endow those who accomplished it with some of the attributed virtues or powers of the slain monster.

The manner of hunting the man eater is a part of recorded tradition, and it is as interesting as it is curious. Elaborate preparations were made, in which the priest doctors, or kahuna, as they were called, took a prominent part. A large quantity of roasted meat of pig and dog was prepared, and finally, with a kahuna in charge, the great double, or outrigger, canoes would put to sea and proceed many miles offshore.

When the proper place had been determined upon the roast meat would be thrown into the water, with the result that usually one or more of the nihihs would be attracted sooner or later. At first the quarry would be wary, but by means of more meat the big fish would finally be attracted close to the canoes and would even become so bold as to thrust its head out of the water to receive the food. Then the natives would begin to feed it with meat soaked in an infusion of a root known as aia, which has a narcotic principle, until it became partially stupefied and floated sluggishly on the surface. After a day or more of this a noose of rope would be slipped over the shark's head and the canoes headed for home, the shark following, a willing captive so long as the food was forthcoming.

In this manner the tamed and partially intoxicated fish would be brought close to a sloping beach, when the rope would be passed ashore and the great creature pulled out of the water by the islanders and soon dispatched. The body would be cut up and various parts of it distributed among the captors, each of whom was supposed to be thus rendered more powerful and less subject to evil influences, according to the part he had taken in the capture. The man who placed the noose over the shark's head was accounted to have been rendered practically invincible.

Why He Was in College. A student of the University of Wisconsin was notably poor in his class work and seemed to take little interest in what he was doing. Finally one of his professors could stand it no longer. He called the boy aside to give him a lecture, which he hoped would awaken more ambition in him.

"Now," he said, "my boy, you must be working to accomplish some end. What is that end? Why are you here at the university? Is it because you intend fitting yourself to be a statesman, a lawyer, a writer or what is it? You must keep this end always in sight, and it will make your work easier and your interest greater. Now tell me what you are working for."

"I came to try to learn enough to be able to understand my father's conversation," Milwaukee Free Press.

Amended the Suggestion. Dean Hole in his memoirs records the case of a sick man who had been prayed for twice daily at a certain cathedral during several weeks, and the repetition of the name becoming somewhat monotonous, "the canon in residence politely suggested that the words for a sick person should be substituted for the name of the invalid. The request received a brief ungracious assent, and at the next service and just before the prayer for all conditions of men the minor canon announced in a tone of early indignation, "The prayers of the church are desired for a person whom I'm not at liberty to mention."

Put Your Money In a New Country

The Pacific Coast extension of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway now under construction, opens to the settler thousands of acres of excellent agricultural land. The new country in Adams, Hettinger, and Bowman Counties, North Dakota, and Butte County, South Dakota, is now reached by the new track. The soil is a dark loam with clay subsoil, and produces in abundance wheat, oats, barley, speltz, flax, corn and potatoes. The land is well adapted to farming, good water is found at a depth of from twenty to fifty feet, and the whole country is underlaid with lignite coal that outcrops along the streams, and in most cases can be had for the digging.

The climate is healthful, the air is dry and invigorating, and the percentage of sunshine is high. Outdoor work can be done almost every day in the year. Rainfall is amply sufficient to raise the crops. Regular mail service has been established, the roads are good, rural telephone lines traverse the country, and automobiles are in common use. The cleared land in this district sells for from $10 to $18 per acre. There are many instances this year where the crop equaled in value the cost of the land.

In Butte County, South Dakota, there is considerable government land open for homestead entry. Government land offices are maintained at Lemmon, Hettinger and Bowman, where filings and final proofs may be made. All of these towns are on the new line of the

Chicago Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway

In Montana, the new railroad traverses good farming land. It has been demonstrated that big crops of grain may be raised. Along the Yellowstone and Musselshell rivers, the water is used for irrigation, and phenomenal yields of alfalfa, sugar beets, and grain, are always certain. In the Judith Basin near Lewistown, Montana, is one of the most remarkable sections to be found on the new line. Under natural rainfall, the famous beach lands produced this year an average of 35 bushels of hard wheat to the acre, and the price was 94 cents per bushel. The basin contains about 1500 square miles and is sparsely settled. Some government land still remains open for settlement. A government land office is maintained at Lewistown. In Fergus County, outside the Judith Basin, is one of the greatest stock countries in the world, and good ranches can be purchased at a reasonable figure.

The Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway Co. has established an immigration department for the purpose of assisting in the settlement and development of the new lands now being opened. Pamphlets descriptive of its resources will be forwarded free on request.

Making a Match.

(Copyright, 1904, by American Press Association.)

Mrs. Hummiman's hobby was match-making. When Mr. Charles Edwin Lupton took up his residence in the city of Mrs. Hummiman's home and presented a letter of introduction to her, her first thought was how to present him to society, the second how to present him with a wife. She determined to invite the social leaders to meet him at dinner and to give him for a table companion a lady, also a newcomer, in whose social preference she took a deep interest.

Mr. Lupton was a man of forty, intellectual, good looking, well to do and of aristocratic mien. He had been abroad for some time, and Mrs. Hummiman knew nothing of his antecedents except that he was vouched for in the highest terms in his letter of introduction. But no one would mistake him for anything else than a gentleman. Miss Overlander, whom Mrs. Hummiman designed for Mrs. Lupton's wife, was thirty-two years old and still a beautiful woman. But a friend of Mrs. Hummiman told some one, who told others, that Miss Overlander was not Miss Overlander at all.

When the dinner guests were assembled in the drawing room, Mrs. Hummiman took Mr. Lupton's arm and led him to the lady beside whom he was to sit at table. There was something so distinguished in both Mr. Lupton's and Miss Overlander's person and manner that the lion of conversation ceased, and all eyes were fixed upon the couple. Both bowed low, the man made some casual observation, the woman replied by an assenting nod, the guests resumed their chat, and not long afterward all passed into the dining room.

There is one thing that matchmakers who are real matchmakers never do. They carefully abstain from any word or act that will intimate their intentions to the objects of their designs. Mrs. Hummiman had thus abstained in the present case, though it had been whispered among the dinner guests that she had intentions concerning Mr. Lupton and Miss Overlander, and during the dinner the couple were the recipients of curious glances. The conversation between the two seemed at first a trifle constrained, and Mrs. Hummiman was not especially encouraged as to the matter she had in view. The lady seemed not especially attracted to her dinner companion, who showed a trifle of embarrassment consequent upon her coldness, and when shortly after the soup she entered into conversation with the gentleman sitting on her other side Mr. Lupton turned to the lady on his other side and became animated.

But at a dinner party one cannot ignore his or her dinner companion very long without being considered rude, and Mr. Lupton and Miss Overlander soon found themselves forced to entertain each other or sit in silence. The lady by this time seemed to have made up her mind to make the best of a bad bargain and ventured several remarks to the gentleman, who sat very stiffly beside her restlessly fingering the stem of his wineglass and occasionally in a perfunctory manner. It became evident to several of the company who were in the secret of the hostess' matchmaking that Mr. Lupton at least was showing a sure sign of entanglement—pique. Then he made some remark in a tone too low to be heard except by Miss Overlander, whereupon she laughingly turned her back on him.

This was near the close of the dinner. When the guests were departing, Mrs. Hummiman asked Mr. Lupton how he was pleased with the lady who had been assigned him for the evening. His reply was a snort and an angry turning away. As Miss Overlander came down from the ladies' cloakroom she received the same question with regard to Mr. Lupton. "Delighted," was her reply in a tone calculated to freeze the marrow in the bones of the questioner. When the last guests were departing, Mr. Hummiman, who had gone out to put a lady in her carriage, returned, with a blank look on his face and whispered to his wife:

"My dear, what do you think?"

"What?"

"Mr. Lupton and Miss Overlander have gone in the same carriage."

"For heaven's sake! What does it mean?"

Now, the departure of the newly introduced couple was seen by two men of the party who were starting for their club. Moved by curiosity, they followed in their carriage. Two hours later they returned to the Hummiman mansion and called for the head of the house. He came down from his bedroom in pajamas.

"Hummiman," said one of the visitors, "it is our duty as your friend to warn you that you and your wife are being deceived. There's something wrong—very wrong—about Miss Overlander."

"Oh, heavens!" exclaimed Mrs. Hummiman from the landing above.

"We saw her leave your house in a carriage with Lupton. We considered it our duty to you to follow them. They drove through the park for an hour and a half, then to a hotel, where they registered as Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Lupton."

"We're ruined," cried Mrs. Hummiman from above. "I'll never hold up my head in society again."

At that moment there was a ring at the bell. Mr. Hummiman opened the door and was handed a telegram. He read aloud:

Thanks for yesterday's extraordinary married couple.

The famous Broadhurst play, "The Man of the Hour," is offered at the Fairbanks Theatre, Wednesday, January 24th. It follows none of the old comedies and is a model among plays depicting great vital questions of the day. It ran for over six hundred times in New York, five months in Boston and six months in Chicago. It is being played by four companies from coast to coast. The special cast to be seen here is the pick of the people who were in the big city runs. "The Man of the Hour" appeals to everyone regardless of age, sex or condition. It entertains and it does not preach. Its love story is human and sympathetic. Its humor creates roars and peals of laughter. It is a different cast from that seen here last season. Most of the people who now portray Mr. Broadhurst's virile and interesting story were then concerned in the long runs in New York and Boston and were not elsewhere available.

Fairbanks Theatre, Springfield, will present George H. Cohan's musical comedy drama, "Fifty Miles from Boston" on Thursday, January 21st. The leading role is that of a demure New England Village postmistress, whose brother gets her into all sorts of perplexing situations. The company is said to be a particularly good one. The chorus is large, well trained and includes some of the most beautiful of the Cohan coterie of show girls many of whom are well known picture models. The song hits are "My Small Town Gal," "Ain't It Awful," "Harrigan," "Boys Who Fight the Flames," "Jack and Jill" and "Wait with Me." The scenes are laid in the town of Brookfield about fifty miles from Boston and the characters are said to be typical New England ones.

Richard Carle will come to the Fairbanks Theatre, Springfield, on Monday January 19th in "Mary's Lamb" a farce which he adapted from the French and outfitted with sixteen musical numbers, all in the best style of his music in "The Spring Chicken." Mr. Carle has made a free adaptation of the French farce, making all the characters American and laying all the scenes in Maverick, N. Y. He appears himself in the part of Leander Lamb, a sort of hen-pecked husband who gets into a variety of difficulties but finally comes into his own after a certain incident in the past life of his dominating wife has been revealed. The songs which promise to prove unusually popular include "I Idolize Ida," "My Madam's Maid," "Betsy's the Belle of the Bathing," "If Number One Met Number Two" and "Leander."

The Political Ladies.

The political ladies are not making revolution; they are making a routine. The report of every meeting will say, in a fixed formula, "The minutes have been read and confirmed and the ladies elected, the business of the meeting began." It will be put on the agenda as a regular thing. At last it will become a quaint old ceremonial. A woman will be technically assumed to make a meeting alive.—Illustrated London News.

Chapter of Accidents.

John's farm, Copeland, was burned to the ground yesterday. On receiving the call the Crawley fire brigade started ringing the alarm bell, which broke and crashed down on the roof. When the brigade arrived at the fire it was found that the nearest water was nearly half a mile away, and when eventually the connection was made the hose burst.—London Express.

Early New England Books Rare.

The recent discovery in England of a copy of the long lost Massachusetts laws of 1648, printed in Cambridge, and its sale to E. Dwight Church, of Brooklyn, for a price said to exceed $5,000, reminds the collectors of the interesting fact that the earliest works printed in New England are among the world's rarest books and are rapidly becoming as valuable as the earliest imprints of William Caxton, England's first printer.
